RE: Incumbent Worker Training Application – Tox Pressotechnik

TOX-Pressotechnik is a medium-sized international company that is driven by engineering. They integrate their standard products (i.e. industrial equipment, assembly presses) into custom systems for various assembly functions to accommodate their customers in automotive, appliance, aerospace, medical and various other industries.

TOX-Pressotechnik wants to train 3 of their employees for Project Management Professional (PMP). The PMP training will open TOX to the opportunities to increase sales. On-schedule projects are critical when customers are considering future business deals. TOX expectations are to be able to save 10% on project costs and increase sales by 20% or more. Therefore, the training will upskill the TOX engineers to become more efficient in project management. It will help increase project volume that can be completed. If training is not implemented, there will be serious limitations on the volume of projects that TOX can successfully complete at one time.
