Subject: Packages possibly stolen

Comment:

Aloha... may this message find loved ones feeling blessed... I am not sure how to resolve this situation because the circumstances are so strange and perhaps sinister... I had been speaking with a man for two years... someone I'd "met" online (not in-person)... this man lives in Florida and is a truck driver who has an address with the iPostal system in the [Redacted] This man reached out via text while I was recovering in the Red Cross shelter after the fires in Lahaina. I bought a plane ticket and winter clothes so that I might meet this man in person. The man suggested I open a mailbox through iPostal and have the clothes sent there. I did so, however I was unable to verify identification because of the fires. All I have is pictures of identification. When I couldn't retrieve the packages I spoke with the manager who claims to have removed the packages from the mailbox. This was a year ago and I have not been able to reach the manager (named John) and the man I was supposed to meet will not respond. I have left social media because I suspected this man somehow hacked accounts. I spent over $1,000 in various ways because this man claimed to want to meet. I would like the eight packages somehow sent to Kihei. I cannot get this manager to return a single phone call and I am under the impression that the people who work there think this is a joke and that I am crazy. I have receipts for the things I purchased. I never received them. I don't know what to do or who to call upon. I am under the impression that Willowbrook is a fairly intimate suburb of Chicago although I've never been outside the city. Feel free to contact using the information in the form. Mahalo in advance.
